

George Zinn

George Zinn is serving his first term on the Board and is a member of the WSIB's Audit Committee.

Zinn is corporate vice president and treasurer for Microsoft, where he is responsible for investing and managing over $150 billion of the company's corporate assets. He oversees management of the company's worldwide financial and corporate risk, investment portfolio, strategic portfolio, foreign exchange, corporate and structured project finance, dilution management, cash and liquidity, customer financing and collection activities.

In 2009, George was recognized by Treasury & Risk Magazine as one of the 100 Most Influential People in Finance. Under his leadership, the Treasury function at Microsoft has been recognized with the Pinnacle Award from the Association for Financial Professionals (AFP) and Treasury Today's Adam Smith Award for Best Practice and Innovation. George recently led his team to winning the Alexander Hamilton Best Practices: Overall Excellence Award.

George has a bachelor's degree in Economics and Environmental Studies and has earned his MBA while working at Microsoft.
